Instructor: John M. Frame

Office hours: Mon., 8-11 AM, others by appointment. I’m in my office most mornings, and if my door is ajar I’ll be happy to see you. Feel free to ask questions or make comments by email, jframe@rts.edu. I will probably give better answers to your questions by email, but I understand that sometimes it’s better to talk face-to-face.

Teaching Assistant: Robert Binion

His email, binion.robert.e@gmail.com. Feel free to talk or write to him about any course matters. Give your papers to him, rather than Dr. Frame, by email, or in hardcopy. He will do the bulk of the grading in the course. In case of a dispute over a grade, please talk to him first. Then if you cannot resolve the matter, Dr. Frame will be happy to arbitrate.

Course Content
Apologetics is the study of how to give reasons for our Christian hope (1 Pet. 3:15). This course has three parts: (1) Christian theory of knowledge, (2) historic and contemporary views of apologetic method, (3) topics in apologetics. In the first part, we shall ask what Scripture says about human knowledge, particularly the process by which a non-Christian comes to know Christ. The second part will deal with the controversy over how to do apologetics, discussing representatives of different apologetic schools. The third part will discuss issues under debate between Christians and non-Christians: the existence of God, the truth of Scripture, the problem of evil, the currents of modern and postmodern thought.

Course Objectives

1. To understand and apply what Scripture says about the nature of human thought and knowledge, especially the knowledge of God.

2. To understand the methods used by Christian thinkers to persuade others of the truth of the Christian faith.

3. To learn how best to discuss matters of controversy between believers and nonbelievers.

4. To learn intellectual humility—to depend on God entirely for apologetic success.

Assignments

1. Complete the reading assignments according to the schedule below.

2. First paper: Write a dialogue between a Muslim and a Christian, in which the Christian seeks to persuade the Muslim of the truth of Christianity. For this, read some sources beyond the required readings of the course. Many of these are listed in the Course Bibliography under “Islam,” pp. 25ff. Among these, I suspect the most useful ones for constructing a dialogue would be the titles of Ghaffari, Hanna, Margolioth, McDowell, Morey, Shenk, Swartley, and Zaca. This paper should be around 3000 words. Due 11 AM, Wed., Dec. 4, the catalogue deadline. Put in the bin with the course name in the Administrative Assistants’ area.

3. Second paper: Another dialogue. This assignment offers two alternatives, described below. Please do either one or the other. The paper should also be turned in before 11 AM on Wed., Dec. 4. Put the paper in the bin marked with the course name in the Administrative Assistants’ area.

   (a) First alternative: Write a paper of approximately 3000 words presenting a fictional apologetic dialogue between a Christian and a non-Christian, or between a Christian having doubts or problems with his faith and another one who tries to help him resolve those. Chapter 9 of AGG provides you a model for the dialogue form, and you can find others, for example, in the books of Peter Kreeft listed in the bibliography. Your dialogue may deal with any subject that might arise in such a conversation, such as the existence of God, the problem of evil, the nature of truth, the authority of Scripture, etc. For this paper, you should do some research beyond the course assignments. The bibliography in this syllabus may help you.

(b) The second alternative: engage in an e-mail dialogue with a non-Christian (or with a Christian who is struggling with some of the difficulties of the faith). Send to Robert all the exchanges, totaling around 3000 words. If the actual dialogue is shorter, you may supplement it with your own analysis of the dialogue: what you did well, not so well, how you might improve your answers if you had it to do again. If your email exchange turns out to be much longer than 3000 words, then please abbreviate. Summarize the parts you have chosen to leave out. “Clean up” the format of the email exchange, deleting the arrows (>>>), putting the exchanges in chronological order, deleting irrelevant parts of the exchange.

4. Final Examination

The final will cover all the reading assignments and lectures in the course. It will be three hours. Time and place to be announced. Please do not study exams from past years. If you do it will be considered cheating.

Hints on Writing Dialogues

Your course paper is to be in the form of dialogue. In a dialogue, two parties are exchanging opposing views. In this assignment, I want the dialogues to be not merely an exchange of views, but an actual debate, in which each party tries (graciously, of course) to refute the other’s position.

If you write a fictional dialogue, you are to master both views well enough to be able to indicate how each party, thinking at his best, would reply to the other’s objections. Some examples of the dialogue form can be found in the writings of Plato, Hume’s Dialogues, the Calvin Beisner’s Answers For Atheists, and many books by Peter Kreeft (see apologetics bibliography), the last chapter of AGG, and CVT, 339-352. Seek "clarity, cogency, and profundity."
If you put together a real dialogue, from email exchanges, etc., it is still necessary for you to learn enough about the other person’s view to deal with his arguments.

A fictional dialogue should consist mostly of short speeches in which each party interacts with the other in detail. In general, they ought to be "ideal" rather than "realistic." "Realistic" dialogues, the kind we have in real life, involve a lot of misunderstanding, arguing at cross purposes, ambiguities, fallacies, etc. To save time and clarify the real issues, avoid those things as much as possible. You should seek to have each thinker make the best possible case for his position, even when, in the final analysis, you believe that position to be false.

In a real dialogue, such as an email exchange, you won’t have control over what your opponent says. But you should try nevertheless to deal with his points specifically, in detail.

I expect you to write concisely. I won’t hold you to a rigid limit, but the rule is this: if you write more than the recommended length, it must be eminently worth the extra space. If you write less, it must be concise, pithy, and profound enough to be equivalent to a longer paper.

Grading

Grading of the assignments in this course is on a pass-fail basis. For the whole course, your grade will be calculated as follows:

- Passing work on assignments 2-4 above: A.
- Passing work on two of these: B.
- Passing work on one of them: C.
- No passing work: F.

Abbreviations for Comments on Papers

- A - awkward
- Amb - ambiguous
- Arg - more argument needed
- C - compress
- Circle (drawn around some text) - usually refers to misspelling or other obvious mistake
- D - define
- E - expand, elaborate, explain
- EA - emphasis argument
Grading System For Papers

I have given out this list of categories to my students for many years. It is not particularly relevant this year, since I am grading you on a pass-fail basis. But these notes will help you to see some of the qualities we are looking for in papers. “Passing” papers are papers that exceed C- on the scale described below.

A: Good grasp of basic issues, plus something really extraordinary, worthy of publication in either a technical or popular publication. That special excellence may be of various kinds: formulation, illustration, comprehensiveness, subtlety/nuance, creativity, argument, insight, correlations with other issues, historical perspective, philosophical sophistication, research beyond the requirements of the assignment. One of these will be enough!

A-: An A paper, except that it requires some minor improvement before an editor would finally accept it for publication.

B+: Good grasp of basic issues but without the special excellences noted above. A few minor glitches.

B: The average grade for graduate study. Good grasp of basic issues, but can be significantly improved.

B-: Shows an understanding of the issues, but marred by significant errors, unclarities (conceptual or linguistic), unpersuasive arguments, and/or shallow thinking.

C+: Raises suspicions that to some extent the student is merely manipulating terms and concepts without adequately understanding them, even though to a large extent these terms and concepts are used appropriately. Does show serious study and preparation.

C: Uses ideas with some accuracy, but without mastery or insight; thus the paper is often confused.

C-: Problems are such that the student evidently does not understand adequately the issues he/she is writing about, but the work may nevertheless be described as barely competent.

D: I don't give D's on papers.

F: Failure to complete the assignment satisfactorily. Such performance would disqualify a candidate for ministry if it were part of a presbytery exam.

Most of my students get B's. I try to keep A's and C's to a relatively small number. F's are extremely rare, but I have given a few.

Course Bibliographies

Religious Knowledge

See also books listed in the Apologetics section below.

Calvin, John, Institutes, I, i-ii.
Clouser, Roy, Knowing With the Heart (Downers Grove: IVP, 1999). Clouser is doctrinally Reformed, Dooyeweerdian in background. Always stimulating.
Frame, Doctrine of the Knowledge of God (P&R, 1987).

Mavrodes, George, Belief in God (NY: Random House, 1970). A very important philosophical work.

Plantinga, Alvin, and Wolterstorff, Nicholas., ed., Faith and Rationality (Notre Dame, Univ. of Notre Dame Press, 1983) Plantinga is greatly respected even in secular philosophical circles. His work is original, much discussed, and not easily classified. Requires some philosophical background. See Frame’s review of this volume in an appendix to DKG. Plantinga is of Christian Reformed background and taught at Calvin College for some years. Now teaches at Notre Dame.

-- Survey of Christian Epistemology (early work).
Wolterstorff, Nicholas, Reason Within the Bounds of Revelation (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1976). Also, see under Plantinga. Wolterstorff also taught at Calvin for many years. He recently moved on to Yale.

Apologetics (General works)

Carnell, Edward J., An Introduction to Christian Apologetics (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1948). See the chapter on Carnell in Frame’s CVT.

Clark, Gordon H., A Christian View of Men and Things (Eerdmans, 1952). Clark was Reformed in theology, and a kind of presuppositionalist, but opposed to some of Van Til’s ideas. This is an excellent work, showing that many human disciplines (history, politics, ethics, etc.) require Christianity.

---, Religion, Reason, and Revelation (P&R).

Clark, Kelly James, Return to Reason (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1990). Follows Plantinga (see below).

Cowan, Steven, ed., Five Views On Apologetics (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2000). Includes six contributions by Frame in support of presuppositionalism. Other authors: William Lane Craig (classical), Gary Habermas (evidential), Paul Feinberg (cumulative case), Kelly Clark (Plantingan Reformed Epistemology).

---, Reasonable Faith (Wheaton: Crossway, 1994).

---, Reasons of the Heart (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1996). Edgar is a presuppositionalist, very knowledgeable about culture, adept at speaking to real people.

---, Apologetics to the Glory of God (P&R, 1994).

Geehan, E. R., ed., Jerusalem and Athens (Presbyterian and Reformed, 1971). A Festschrift: essays in honor of Van Til. Some are critical of him and advocate the “traditional method,” among them the essays by Pinnock and Montgomery, which sum up well the standard criticisms. See also Van Til’s “My Credo,” which contains a four-page outline summary of his system.

--, Christian Apologetics (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1976).
--, Philosophy of Religion (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1974).

Geisler is an evangelical Thomist, follows a generally traditional method.

Hanna, Mark, Crucial Questions in Apologetics (Baker, 1981). Tries to establish a position called “veridicalism,” between “presuppositionism” and “verificationism.” His concept of presuppositionism is a straw man; his veridicalism is very close to Van Til, once you get past the rhetoric.

Kreeft, Peter, The Best Things in Life (Downers Grove, IVP, 1984).
--, Between Heaven and Hell (Downers Grove, IVP, 1982).
--, Socrates Meets Jesus (Downers Grove, IVP, 1987).

Kreeft converted to Roman Catholicism from Reformed background. He is fond of C. S. Lewis and follows Lewis’s basic apologetic. Excellent writer.
--, and Tacelli, Ronald, Handbook of Christian Apologetics (Downers Grove: IVP, 1994). A comprehensive overview of the field. For example, it contains twenty arguments for God’s existence.

Lewis, C. S., Mere Christianity (Macmillan)
--, Miracles. Lewis is one of the best apologetic writers of all time. We can learn much from his style. His content is uneven.

Marston, George, The Voice of Authority (Vallecito: Ross House, 1978). This is the simplest of all the simplifications of Van Til.

Mayers, Ronald B., Both/And: A Balanced Apologetic (Chicago: Moody Press, 1984). Like Hanna, tries to find a middle ground that allows both presuppositions and evidences. I think Van Til already found it. But there are good things in the volume.

McDowell, Josh, Evidence That Demands a Verdict (San Bernardino: Here’s Life, 1979). McDowell has published a great many books of evidences. He doesn’t worry too much about apologetic method, just sets out the facts. Lots of quotations from others. The author is not a profound thinker, but these books are handy summaries of relevant data. He does sometimes amuse, as when talking about the “swooooooooooon theory.”

McGrath, Alister, Intellectuals Don’t Need God and Other Modern Myths (Zondervan, 1993). McGrath has a great reputation as an evangelical Oxford scholar. His appendix on Van Til, however, is incompetent.

Miethe, T., and Flew, Antony, Did Jesus Rise From the Dead? Interesting dialogue between a traditional apologist and a strongly anti-Christian philosopher. His appendix on Van Til is not well-informed.

 --, Faith Founded on Fact.
 --, Where is History Going? Traditional. See also his essay in Jerusalem and Athens (under Geehan, above).

Morris, Thomas, Making Sense of It All (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1992). Applies the ideas of Pascal to the modern situation.

Murray, Michael J., ed., Reason For the Hope Within (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1999).

Nash, Ronald, Faith and Reason (Zondervan, 1988). Nash is influenced by Clark, but more eclectic. Writes clearly.
 --, Worldviews in Conflict (Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1992).

Notaro, Thom, Van Til and the Use of Evidence (Phillipsburg: Presbyterian and Reformed, 1980). Shows that Van Til did have a positive view of the use of evidence in apologetics.

Pinnock, Clark, Reason Enough (Downers Grove: IVP, 1980).
Ramm, Bernard, Varieties of Christian Apologetics, a historical survey.
Robbins, John, Cornelius Van Til: The Man and the Myth (Jefferson, MD: The Trinity Foundation, 1986). I mention this only to warn you about it. Robbins is a fanatical follower of Gordon Clark who has very little understanding of Van Til. This book, as a critique of Van Til, is simply incompetent.
Sire, James, Why Should Anyone Believe Anything at All? (Downers Grove: IVP, 1994). Good comparison of Christianity with alternative worldviews.
Van Til, Cornelius, Christian Apologetics (Phillipsburg: Presbyterian and Reformed, 1975). This was the basic syllabus for Van Til's first-year apologetics course. In many ways it remains the best introduction to his thought.
--, The Defense of the Faith (P&R, 1955; second abridged edition, 1963). This is his first published exposition of his system.
--, Introduction to Systematic Theology (P&R, 1974). This, together with the above three, is of major importance to understanding Van Til's approach.
--, Why I Believe in God (OPC, undated). Pamphlet. Van Til's only writing with a non-Christian reader in mind. Quite fascinating.
--, The Works of Cornelius Van Til on CD-ROM. Available from P&R. Most all his writings, a complete bibliography, fifty one hours of audio sermons, lectures, discussions. A very helpful tool.

Lapide, Pinchas, The Resurrection of Jesus: a Jewish Perspective (Minneapolis: Augsburg, 1983). Lapide is a Jewish rabbi, who concluded that Jesus was actually raised from the dead. Lapide, however, accepted Jesus only as a prophet, not as the Messiah or the Son of God.
Osborne, Grant, The Resurrection Narratives: A Redactional Study (Grand Rapids: Baker, 1984). Careful and detailed analyses of the texts, supporting their integrity and reliability.

The Problem of Evil

See also works listed under General Apologetics, above.

Adams, Jay, The Grand Demonstration: A Biblical Study of the So-called Problem of Evil (Santa Barbara: EastGate, 1991). I offered some criticisms of this in AGG, which Adams answered in an Appendix. Actually, I think this is one of the better books on the subject.
Gerstner, John, The Problem of Pleasure (P&R, 1983). Building on the Reformed doctrine of the Fall, Gerstner argues that the real problem is this: Why should God allow fallen sinners to have any pleasure at all?

A process philosopher, Griffin reasons that God is blameless because he is not sovereign. See Frame’s review in Calvin Theological Journal 27:2 (Nov., 1992), 435-38.

Margoliouth, D.S. Mohammed and the Rise of Islam (C.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1931). This is my favor treatment of the subject. Margoliouth was a Messianic Jew—the son of a rabbi. He was a great linguist and philologist who taught Islamic studies at Oxford and really knew his way around the primary sources. He exposes Muhammad for the charlatan he was. Scholarly, but written with dry wit. Available in other editions.

Lingel, Morton, Nikides, ed., Chrislam: How Missionaries Are Promoting an Islamized Gospel. This has been a resource for those who have been very concerned of late about contextualization methods being used in the Islamic world. The PCA has a study committee looking at this. I was on an EPC work group that gave a brief assessment of what is going on. Some of the concerns of the book may be exaggerated if my friends working in the Muslim world are correct. But the book does represent a perspective within the conservative Reformed community and it raises legitimate issues.

Margoliouth, D.S. Mohammed and the Rise of Islam (C.P. Putnam’s Sons, 1931). This is my favor treatment of the subject. Margoliouth was a Messianic Jew—the son of a rabbi. Morey, Robert. The Islamic Invasion (Eugene, OR: Harvest House, 1992). Although the quality of Morey’s arguments is somewhat uneven, there’s a lot of good material here, and the book has more apologetic punch than Nazir-Ali’s. Morey also has the most reliable theology of any of these writers. Popular reading level. Bibliography.

These are the “internet infidels.” They have a discussion forum, and you can find non-Christians here who might be willing to dialogue with you for your paper assignment.
4. http://www.thirdmill.org

Rich Pratt’s web site, with a world vision for Christian education. Posts articles on many different subjects. Discussion forum. See also www.reformedperspectives.org, which posts the magazine articles and hosts the “Hall of Frame.” The Hall contains excellent student papers from Frame courses and also the supplementary papers for this and other Frame courses. Another sub-site of Thirdmill is www.reformedanswers.org, which posts answers to a lot of theological and apologetic questions. J. Frame and Ra McLaughlin are among the responders.

5. http://www.vantil.info/

Lots of information about Van Til, articles about him from people like Bahnsen, Frame, Pratt, Hays, Welty, and others, along with Van Til himself. Includes Eric Bristley’s comprehensive bibliography of Van Til’s writings.

6. http://www.apologetics.com/default.jsp

Robert Bowman’s web site. He has some sympathy for presuppositionalism, but has a fairly broad reach methodologically. Lots of good stuff.

7. http://www.capo.org/

David Hall founded this site, the “Center for the Advancement of Paleo-Orthodoxy.” These folks are conservative Presbyterians. Part of their site is “the Van Til Institute for Apologetics.”

8. http://www.carm.org/

This is the Christian Apologetics and Research Ministry, started by my former student Matt Slick. Some good material here.

9. http://www.reformed.org/

The Center for Reformed Theology and Apologetics, founded by Jon Barlow. Oriented toward Presuppositionalism.

This is the web site of Hugh Ross, the Christian astronomer who has written and lectured broadly on scientific matters. I think he’s one of the most impressive figures writing today on Christianity/Science issues. An old-earth creationist, anti-evolution.

John Byl here analyzes a number of scientific, mathematical, and logical arguments dealing with Christian theism. A bit abstruse to those not into these disciplines, but he is a very sharp and edifying thinker.

James White’s Apologetics Blog.

Peter Jones’ organization. The author of Spirit Wars argues that modern western culture is awash in pagan thinking similar to ancient Gnosticism. Peter has done a lot of good research on Gnosticism, modern culture, and the Scriptures.

Contains materials from contemporary Christian philosophers, among others.

Leadership University. Contains articles on a number of subjects including a very substantial number of apologetics articles, mostly by people working in the “traditional” mode.

Useful articles in a number of fields including apologetics. The apologetics material includes some presuppositional resources. Many audio lectures at http://www.rctr.org/ap5.htm by well-known apologists and Christian philosophers.

The “Sola Scriptura” site. Articles on apologetics and other subjects.

18. http://www.trinityfoundation.org/reviews/last.asp
John Robbins runs the Trinity Foundation site. He is a fanatical disciple of Gordon H. Clark, and the site spends much of its space trashing people that deserve much better treatment. I have no confidence in Robbins as a writer, but this site contains a lot of information about Gordon H. Clark who was, in my judgment, one of the best apologists of the twentieth century.

Many articles by Steve Hays, Ryan McReynolds, and others.

Ravi Zacharias’ ministry.

23. www.radicalism.org Also on Islam.
