I. Academic Information

Course Description: This seminar is intended to be the capstone of your theological degree, and serves as a vehicle for reviewing what you have learned and an aid in articulating and defending your theological views.

In the case of Presbyterian and Reformed students, this course will also help you to state and explain your biblical and doctrinal commitments on the floor of a presbytery or synod. Indeed, the format of the course is explicitly designed for this end. The course has six areas of focus: biblical studies, systematic theology, Church history, Apologetics, church government and practice, and various “hot topics”—traditional and contemporary areas of controversy or concern about which the student needs to be prepared to state and defend his views (e.g., “Open Theism,” “New Perspective on Paul,” “Federal Vision,” women’s ordination, contemporary Roman Catholic theology, theistic evolution, inerrancy, “theonomy,” etc.)

1 PCA and OPC examination formats are emphasized, but all students are welcome and will profit from the course.
Course Goals:
- To sharpen students’ practical skill in stating and defending their theology in live situations, “on your feet.”
- To work through practice exams for ordination.

Prerequisites: There are no required prerequisites for PT612, but the course is designed to be taken in a student’s senior year, with the assumption that his core courses have been taken and sustained. Students hoping to receive maximum benefit from Preparing for Ordination should complete the majority of their biblical, systematic, and Church history courses prior to this class, as well as their RTS English Bible Test and RTS Shorter Catechism Test.

Auditing: Students intending to serve as ordained pastors in any denomination or independent church are encouraged to audit this course at some point in their time at RTS DC, in part to help them see the level of competence and theological fluency which they are striving to achieve in seminary. They are especially encouraged to take this informative and often enjoyable course in their final year.

Format: Much of this class is spent raising and answering questions – students asking one another questions, faculty asking students questions, students asking faculty questions, and faculty asking each other questions! This is a practical course which is intended to help students speak honestly, concisely, politely, and accurately.

To participate in this course, students must be willing to submit their ideas for class discussion and positive critique. It is our belief that a willingness to see one’s work critiqued is a valuable skill to be learned as soon as possible, and to be promoted as much as possible, especially among one’s elders and peers. To that end, this class will seek to model an encouraging environment of robust discussion – and we will pray that God will help us all to live humbly before him, and to speak the truth (or our opinions!) with grace and in love.

Please note: (1) Students should feel free to work in groups as they are able, both in developing questions, and in formulating answers (see Assignments, below). (2) Your professors are here to support you in this class. We expect you to try hard, to make many mistakes, and to have incomplete answers. We are here to help. You are among friends.

Assignments:

A. Reading

This reading has in view your own evaluation of the standards (see below).
2. Bryan Chapell and Jim Meek, Preparing for Licensure and Ordination Exams. This book was written for PCA ordination exams. Orthodox Presbyterian students will receive a modified assignment in this book.

3. The Book of Church Order of the Presbyterian Church in America, or The Orthodox Presbyterian Church (depending on the Church to which you belong).

B. Writing:
1. Exception(s): Prepare a brief explanation of any exceptions you take to the teaching of the Confession and Catechisms (12 point font, double spaced). By “exception” we mean any phrase or doctrine you find contrary to the teaching of Holy Scripture, or whose faithfulness to Scripture you are unsure. The explanation is to follow these guidelines:

   - Where you have a question about the meaning of the words or phrases of the Standards, look in the Glossary of terms found in John Bower, The Larger Catechism, A Critical Text and Introduction (978-1601780850) and/or Richard A. Muller, Dictionary of Latin and Greek Theological Terms (both on reserve).

Written assignment: Briefly state your own view and be prepared to discuss it in class.

2. Questions: Prepare between ninety and one hundred questions with brief biblical/theological answers. Make these questions realistic. Aim to pitch it at the level that you think that you would be questioned on the floor of presbytery – no softballs, or curve balls, but serious questions nonetheless. The questions should be divided over the following areas:

   1. Bible content. These are not about theology as such, but about the Bible. E.g., what is the outline of the book of Genesis? Where are three OT prophecies about Christ’s birth? Did Isaiah write Isaiah?
   2. Theology. Include the sacraments. Include questions on the Westminster Confession of Faith.
   3. Church History. Dates and names are important, but do not merely ask about trivia. Include several questions about your own denominational history.
   4. Apologetics. Ask questions that address agnosticism, atheism, cults, contemporary trends, and world religions. Ask questions about apologetic method.
   5. Church government and practice. Ask questions about biblical teaching about church government, as well as some practical questions relating to church practice.
   6. Hot topics. Ask questions that query the student’s knowledge of, and ability to respond to, various problematic ideas or developments in theology and church life.

Written assignment: Produce 90-100 questions divided into six roughly equal sections.
3. Answers: Prepare, at least in your own mind, and probably on paper, answers to each of these questions. Try to have (1) a brief answer (because brevity is beautiful), and (2) an in depth answer (because sometimes a questioner will want to see how you think through issues, and whether your knowledge is peripheral or deep), and (3) biblical support for your answer, wherever relevant (know the biblical chapter at least, and chapter and verse if possible).

Assessment and Due dates

A. Deadline for written work: Both written assignments (Any exceptions and your 90-100 questions) are due to Dr. Griffith on April 25, 2014. Electronic submissions are fine. The professors will read these before the class meets.

B. Evaluation:

- Completed reading and writing, 40%.
- Class participation, 60%.

Recommended Reading

Bible Content

William Hendriksen, Bible Survey

Theology

- Louis Berkhof, Summary of Christian Doctrine
- J. I. Packer, Concise Theology
- Your lecture notes from ST classes.

PCA History

- Morton Smith, How is the Gold Become Dim

OPC History
